Tom Watson is the greatest shipping melon ever introduced.

Its hard, tough rind enables it to stand much rough treatment and still reach distant markets in good condition.

It is a good keeper, remaining fresh longer than any other shipping melon.

As originally introduced the quality was rather poor. Often the flesh was pale, stringy, and lacking in sweetness.

By careful breeding and selection through a long period of years we have developed a strain of Tom Watson that ripens about a week earlier than the original, is very productive, has rich red flesh of fine texture and luscious quality, the equal of most of the finer eating varieties in sweetness and flavor. We believe our strain of Watson to be unequaled in the essentials of earliness, productiveness, and quality.

CUCUMBERS

All Popular Varieties

We have exceptionally fine stocks of some of the newer varieties, and our stocks of the older varieties we believe to be equal to the best. No expense or care has been spared to provide the very choicest seed for our 1938 crops.

Write us for special quotations on your Cucumber requirements.

We can make delivery of Cucumber seed late in July when desired, which will be in time for Fall planting in the lower South.

The Distribution of Poor Seed Is An Economic Wrong.

H. M. TAYLOR

Seedsman

Inc.

Are the only seed growers in a territory embracing about twelve hundred square miles lying between the Apalachicola River, the Flint River, Little River, and Ocklockonee River, in North Florida.

Here we have a variety of soils, fertile and well watered. Much of it similar to the best trucking lands of Ohio and Pennsylvania, some like the garden soils of New Jersey, and the Little River Delta lands of a character peculiar to this locality.

These delta lands are particularly congenial to most cucurbits, and members of the Solanum Family.

Agricultural production is principally cigar tobacco combined with live stock and dairying.

By reason of the topography together with local conditions and environment we are able to more thoroughly segregate varieties and strains of the seed crops we grow than would be possible in perhaps any other suitable growing area.

We can reproduce from your own stocks when desired and maintain their purity by perfect segregation and handling.
